Her Majesty The Queen in The Quarterly Review
"Is A Future For The Work"

The continuing need for Red Cross peace-time is stressed in a message from Her Majesty The Queen, president of the Red Cross Society, published in the first issue of the Quarterly Review published since the war ended in Europe.

"There is a failure for our work," the Red Cross Society will be needed even in the better world for which we are all striving; there will be need for relief, and the firmness of the peace-time conditions may be different, but the need will be the same.

There is one Australian liberated prisoner of war who is convinced that the Red Cross is everywhere.

Hidden Wealth

Spig Up Money From the Ground In Order To Pay Ball

Some folks hide money in jurn fern, under mattresses or over cupboard. But Adolph Johnson of Windsor, in the best traditions of swashbuckling, hid his money in the ground.

Police escorted Johnson to his old home after he told them he wanted to get money to bail himself out of jail on a liquor charge. Shun-

Bomb Test

Scientist Suggests A Typical American City Would Be Graced

Dr. David Inglis, an atomic bomb scientist, has called for a bomb test on a typical American city to map the public mind of its "inferior of thought."

Inglis said it is impossible, he said, a complete city of concrete and steel, including bridges and skyscrapers, should be built in the desert for the experiment.

Inglis said he believed this would bring home to the people the terrible destructive power with which we are dealing. Afterward, he said, the city could be preserved as a sort of monument.

He recently returned as associate professor of physics at Johns Hopkins University after working on the Manhattan bomb project for three years. He said the atom bomb tests on edge would be of little value.

Naval vessels are built of steel with some steel and steel rivets studied, he explained. They are built to withstand storms and have resistance against fire. They are built to survive a Cuban against attack.

"We certainly have as many observations as we have obsolete ships if it is an atom war we are thinking about," he said.

Inglis said he was "shocked" that the public seemed to believe that the atom bomb and Nagasaki were cities built of wood and paper. Actually new New York City is not steel, he said.

Mercy Flights

Saskatchewan Has An Air Ambulance Service

Believed to be the first of its kind on the North American continent, the Saskatchewan Government's air ambulance service for the south of the province was inaugurated Feb. 3, on the basis of a wild winter which filled the highways and airroads.

Similar services are operated in New Zealand and Australia.

First patient was a 37-year-old Lumber dealer, who was taken within 24 hours the ambulance plane, a Norseman, responded to the same area to pick up a girl who was seriously injured.

Each week, however, is expected to carry seven persons, including crew of a five-place aircraft with a war record of five years with the R.C.A.F. and with the Western Wing.

The plane, powered with a single 600 h.p. Pratt and Whitney Wasp engine has a cruising speed of 130 miles per hour and a range of 500 miles. The flying ambulance has been specially fitted for its work with a section of the cabin removable to permit easy loading and unloading.

It is a five-place aircraft, licensed to carry seven persons, including crew of a five-place aircraft with a war record of five years with the R.C.A.F. and with the Western Wing.

The plane will take emergency calls as they come, although "mercy flights" will be in daylight only. Most of Malchin's landings for patients will be on unpaved fields, and he will carry his patients at an altitude of 1,000 feet or less, so that the plane will not be affected by the patients.

Declined of the air ambulance was demonstrated on its first flight, when Malcolm landed his craft within 100 yards of the patient's home. The following day he was forced to make several landing attempts before he brought the plane down on a rough field some distance from the patient's home. The girl was brought to the aircraft by sling.

HEAVY PROGRAM OF WORK FACES PARLIAMENT WHEN RECONvenes ON MARCH 14th

OTTAWA—A heavy program of work will face members of parliament when they reconvene on March 14 for the second session of the 34th parliament. It is not yet possible to be planned in a more definitive manner than the Canadian representation at the conference in May.

A session in close touch with federal affairs said the government plan to suggest that the session open on the day of May 1 by June 15, the latest and the session will be held in July, August or early September. It was also said that cabinet changes may be made in the summer of 1945, following the opening of the session, with Justice Minister St. Laurent being given an official jurisdiction over the external affairs department, now headed by Prime Minister Mackenzie King.

External-affairs Minister St. Laurent was mentioned as a possible successor to Mr. King as justice minister. There were reports, too, that the external affairs Minister might be expected to resign, and that he might be replaced by Walter Scott, parliamentary secretary to the Minister of Agriculture.

The session will see Mr. King come to the conclusion external affairs were developing into a full-time job and should be handled by a minister with that portfolio.

Canada never had a minister of external affairs. Mr. St. Laurent was the United Nations conference in San Francisco.

Mr. King and royal highnesses the Canadian delegation to the UNO in London. Mr. King has not yet indicated who will go to the peace conference for Canada. It is said Mr. St. Laurent will be among those going.

While the peace conference was an agreement on peace terms for the world, the session will see the UNO treaty will be submitted to the parliament when it reconvenes in the autumn.

World Wide Anarchy Might Have Resulted, Had There Been No British Empire

(By Sir Norman Angell in the London Daily Mail)

AT THE Diplomatic Conference in America is likely to find himself asked to "republish the British Empire" in much the same effort that a man might ask you to "republish" his own life. For almost 90 out of 100 Americans regard the simple existence of the Empire as a crime. They believe that the time for repentance and liquidation has come.

It is easy, of course, to reply simply that Americans are occupying the heads of a people who have been virtually exterminated; that the great regions of the southwest and territories of the California, New Mexico and earlier Spanish, were not pre-Christmas presents to the United States.

But I suggest we should do better than that; that the real cause for the Empire is of a very different kind; that we have failed in the past to present it as indignantly as it ought to be presented; and that apart from the fact that it there had been no British Empire Hitler would have won the war of which a most presently—the case lies broadly along this line.

The supreme need of our atomists is to avoid anarchy on the one side and the tyranny of a world totalitarian police-state like that which Hitler would have established on the other.

Industry would almost certainly arise if the more dissolution of Britain, and the disintegration of the British Empire, were to be the result of the setting up of small independent nations in Africa, and the world dominated by rival local chieftains and petty potentates.

That such anarchy is the almost certain result of the rights of the British Empire, we have seen. It is a world of anarchy which we have seen.

After the fall of the Roman Empire Europe drifted into the utter darkness of the Dark Ages.

The nations of the Hapsburg Empire had much to complain of, but had limited freedom.

It is the dissolution of that Empire, the constituent nations have not been freed.

If we are to get a world dominated by sufficient power to maintain the atomists, but not yet one that is too strong to be overthrown, we must have a world of small nations, we cannot afford casual unity to take power, we must have a world of small nations, we cannot afford casual unity to take power, we must have a world of small nations, we cannot afford casual unity to take power.

Five. The central empires should be transformed by steady evolution, first of all into unions like that of the British Empire, and then into a world of small nations, we cannot afford casual unity to take power, we must have a world of small nations, we cannot afford casual unity to take power.

And Hitler would have won the war. But that is the kind of protection we would have had but for the existence of the British Empire.

For if, in 1940, after the fall of France, there had been no British Empire, the British Empire would have been a world of small nations, we cannot afford casual unity to take power, we must have a world of small nations, we cannot afford casual unity to take power.

There would have been no adequate Pacific base for MacArthur, no adequate base for Eisenhower, no adequate base in India for the Chinese, no means of aiding Russia.

And Hitler would have won the war. But that is the kind of protection we would have had but for the existence of the British Empire.

Learning About Japan

Country is Quickly Becoming An Open Book To Allies

One of the world's most mysterious nations before that war, Japan is rapidly becoming an "open book" to the officials of the Allied occupation forces. Through Allied intelligence, more than 1,200 documents and reports are already on file with more coming in at the rate of several hundred a week.

Japan's war potential has been made clear, and within a few months the production economy of the nation subjected to a microscopic survey so far. The information that the United States government will receive from Japan is so vast that Japan than any country ever possessed.

A typical week's work taken from the intelligence section's library provides a picture of the Japanese. The Japanese food, however, effective. The Japanese food, however, effective. The Japanese food, however, effective.

Fibre Glass Is Replacing Ropes In Life-Boats

Fibre glass manufacture developed from two main branches during the war—boat and textile—Sir Hugh, chairman of a glass manufacturing firm, said at Birmingham, England.

But word, one of the most efficient insulators known, is being used in the construction of life-boat hulls, he said, and is being prepared at the rate of 100,000 a week.

Glass is replacing ropes in life-boat hulls and is particularly useful in Pacific areas where it resists organisms which attack other materials.

Sir Hugh said the glass table cloth is the "housewife's dream, but she won't get it just yet. We have to make it non-conducting and stronger, so that when the housewife puts it into a tub she won't tear it.

There Are Many Details In Connection With Bringing Her Serviceman's Bride To Canada

THERE is much more to bringing a Canadian serviceman's bride to Canada than one might at first suppose, and there are a great many people involved before the bride eventually reaches her new home. The first step is the bride's registration with the Civilian Registration Section, Canadian War Relocation, London. Here the girl is requested to give names and addresses of relatives or friends with whom she plans to reside either permanently or temporarily.

Arrangements which have been made in Canada for the reception of the bride are required to be carefully investigated by the Department of Mines and Technical Surveys (Immigration Branch) to ascertain if they are suitable, as far as housing conditions will permit. The wife and children if any, will be medically examined, and when shipping arrangements are available the long journey can be made.

When she is ready to go she is given a priority grant according to the income of her husband in Canada. All relevant facts are considered and a grant of up to $100 is at or already discharged from the service. She is then allowed to transfer excess funds over 10 pounds if required, and is given a grant of $100 if she is already discharged from the service.

These last two are big items in the United Kingdom and hold considerable importance in Canada. The bride is then allowed to transfer excess funds over 10 pounds if required, and is given a grant of $100 if she is already discharged from the service.
